NEW QUESTION: 2

Level DB is the default database for Hyperledger Fabric and is particularly appropriate when ledger states comprise what type of data?

- A. Simple key-value pairs
- B. Rich Queries

C. Complex key-value pairs

D. JSON data pairs

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

Simple key-value pairs - LevelDB is the default and is particularly appropriate when ledger states are simple key-value pairs. A LevelDB database is closely co-located with a network node - it is embedded within the same operating system process.

CouchDB is a particularly appropriate choice when ledger states are structured as JSON documents because CouchDB supports the rich queries and update of richer data types often found in business transactions. Implementation-wise, CouchDB runs in a separate operating system process, but there is still a 1:1 relation between a network node and a CouchDB instance. All of this is invisible to chaincode.
