NEW QUESTION: 1

I built Service Composition A, which is comprised of 4 services. It was very successful in that it fulfilled all of its expected business requirements. I was then assigned a new project that required me to deliver a new service composition called Service Composition B. After studying the new business requirements, I realized that one of the services in Service Composition A could be reused "as is" in Service Composition B. However, when I tried to make it part of Service Composition B,

I ran into a number of problems. In the end, it turned out that even though the service was reusable, it was simply not designed to participate in more than one service composition. Which service-orientation principle would have addressed this issue if I would have applied it to the service prior to completing Service Composition A? Select the correct answer.

- A. Service Reusability
- B. Service Composability
- C. Service Discoverability
- D. There is no service-orientation principle that addresses this issue.

Answer: B

What optional EIGRP configurations will be required in order to achieve full connectivity within AS 100?

- A. Use the variance command on R3.
- B. Use the passive interface command between the R3 and R1 connection and between the R3 and R2 connection.
- C. Use the EIGRP no auto-summary command on R1 and R2.
- D. Use the EIGRP no auto-summary command on R3 and R4.
- E. Use the passive interface on the R1 and R2 interface that connects to the 10.1.1.0/24 and 10.1.2.0/24 subnet respectively.

Answer: C

Explanation:

EIGRP automatically summarizes routes at the classful boundary, the boundary where the network address ends as defined by class-based addressing. In most cases, auto summarization is a good thing, keeping the routing tables as compact as possible. In the presence of discontinuous subnetworks, automatic summarization must be disabled for routing to work properly. To turn off auto-summarization, use the following command:

```
Router(config-router)#no auto-summary
```
