NEW QUESTION: 3

Which two features do you find in decision tables? Select two.

- A. Data can be used for only one rule evaluation.
- B. Data sets can be reviewed for conflicts.
- C. Sets of input data can be bucketed and reviewed for gaps.
- D. A rule evaluation can only be used to enter new output data.

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

Decision tables help you design your multi-condition business rules with conflict and gap analysis.

Note: The Oracle Business Rules Editor supports both IF/THEN rules and Decision Tables. Each condition row in a Decision Table tests the allowed values of a data input to the ruleset, called a fact. Each column represents a particular bucketset, an enumerated fact value or range. The combination of all the condition tests in a column specifies an action, typically setting the value of a data output. The complete Decision Table defines a ruleset, deployed as a business rule component invoked from the process as a Business Rule task in BPMN. The editor provides quick tools for resolving gaps and conflicts in the table.
