NEW QUESTION: 1

View the image below and identify the attack

- A. TFN
- B. Reflection Attack
- C. DoS
- D. DDoS

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

When a hacker has a collection of compromised systems, it is referred to as a botnet (network of bots). In the exhibit they are marked as zombies. The hacker can use all of these systems to carry out powerful distributed-denial-of-service (DDoS) attacks or even rent these systems to spammers. The owner of this botnet controls the systems remotely, usually through the Internet Relay Chat (IRC) protocol.

Incorrect Answers:

B: A DoS attack is similar to a DDoS attack, but in a DoS attack there is only one single source of the attack.

C: The Tribe Flood Network or TFN is a set of computer programs to conduct various DDoS attacks such as ICMP flood, SYN flood, UDP flood and Smurf attack. From the exhibit we have no evidence of a TFN attack, just of a DDoS attack.

D: A reflection attack is a method of attacking a challenge-response authentication system that uses the same protocol in both directions. That is, the same challenge-response protocol is used by each side to authenticate the other side. A reflection attack uses only a single computer as source, not a set of zombie computers.
