NEW QUESTION: 2

You have a Microsoft Azure virtual machine named SQL1 that has Microsoft SQL Server 2016 installed.

SQL1 has a critical database that contains online transaction data. The database is 700 GB.

You regularly perform full database backups.

On a separate Azure virtual machine, you run a test restore procedure of the database and discover that restoring the database takes longer than expected.

You need to reduce the amount of time required to restore the database.

What should you do?

- A. Create multiple filegroups in the database, and then modify the backup solution to use filegroup backups.
- B. Partition the tables in the database, and then modify the backup solution to use incremental backups.
- C. Modify the backup solution to use differential database backups.
- D. Modify the backup solution to use transaction log backups.
